About Lynx Edicions

Lynx Edicions has built an international reputation as a publishing house committed to providing ornithology and natural history books of the very highest quality.

Founded in Barcelona in 1989, our flagship publication is the acclaimed Handbook of the Birds of the World, a 17-volume encyclopaedia which is the first to describe and illustrate all the species of birds in the world.

We are continuously expanding our selection of titles, working in conjunction with some of the most prestigious international scientific organizations dedicated to zoological investigation: BirdLife International, the American Museum of Natural History, the Smithsonian Institution, IUCN or Conservation International, among others.

Our rights catalogue of ornithology and natural history titles includes a wide range of identification and wildlife guides, monographs and bird checklists. All of them display the accuracy and scientific rigour that we are known for.

We also offer a children’s book collection devoted to nature with the aim of bringing to young readers our love of nature and our expertise in the field of natural history books.

If you would like more detailed information or sample copies of any of our titles, please feel free to contact us:

Children’s Books

Ales de Paper Collection (Paper Wings Collection)

Books designed to stimulate children’s interest in the natural environment.

Stories that tell us about nature... and its protagonists.

The Learning section brings us close to science... and explains all the difficult words!

Ales de paper is our way of bringing to young readers our love of nature and our expertise in the field of natural history books. The main aim of the collection is to present children aged 5 to 12 with original stories set in the natural world, encouraging them to discover and protect the environment.

The collection features an original story followed by a learning section that offers educational information about different science subjects. This approach seeks to encourage learning by stimulating the imagination and presenting scientific facts.

What makes the Ales de Paper series unique in the world of children’s books is the double emphasis on literature and science. The fictional story centres around characters drawn from the natural world, such as talking whales, fugitive parrots and hidden forest treasures.

The learning section expands on the story with educational facts: Who carries the pollen? How can we help save the whales? What are the most amazing birds on earth?

All titles include full colour illustrations throughout to help children appreciate and enjoy the natural world around them. All the stories have been written by renowned Spanish authors, and the educational texts have been accurately prepared by professional biologists. The books are published in Catalan and/or Spanish.

The collection is structured in three series according to age groups. The Orange Series, for children aged 5 to 7, the Blue Series, for children aged 7 to 10, and the Green Series, for children aged 10 to 12.

Ratoncita at the Circus
Nathalie Pons
Illustrations: Anna Llenas & Carles Salom

When the circus comes to town, Ratoncita is astonished at the huge, imposing lion. The beast is unhappy, though – he hates being kept in a cage and longs to be as free as when he was young and lived on the savannah. Ratoncita would love to be as big and strong as the lion, to stride into the ring and hear the crowd’s applause. She has an idea: the magician has a magic box she can use to change herself into a lion, and the lion into a mouse.

The Angry Chameleon
Elena Angulo
Illustrations: Cristina Durán & Carles Salom

Bernard is an angry chameleon who thinks that changing one’s colour is a very ridiculous thing to do, and hates the fact that all the other chameleons do so. He’s been bitter and lonesome, and proud of his one-colourfulness, for as long as he can remember, and he believes that his colour of anger is the nicest. Until one day he meets Serafí, another chameleon who shows him that what he thought was the colour of anger is in fact the colour of sadness...

Birder Grandpa

Pere Martí i Bertran
Illustrations: Jordi Vila Delclòs & Laura Regas

Paul’s grandfather must move to an old people’s home, and his grandson has to take care of his birds. The absence of the old man makes Paul very sad. The boy will do anything possible to visit his grandfather and tell him about his beloved birds. This is a story with two endings, so that we can choose one and learn to value how important freedom is, for people as well as for birds or any other animal.

Bernard doesn’t want to go to the summer camp. He’d rather stay at home and watch TV or play videogames. He doesn’t know that in the camp he will go through a magic experience that will change his life forever. The Moon and the elements of the Earth will talk to him about all the problems of Planet Earth. The song of the Moon is melancholic, but it is also full of power and hope. Learning section about “the voices of the Earth” and environmental problems.

“Then there’s a bird in a poem, the poem has wings.” This is what Antonio García Teijeiro wishes to transmit in this poetry book. Through its pages you will find all the birds you can imagine, flying over verses inspired by the poets who, as Antonio, once put wings to their poetry and made it fly too. Learning section about bird song.
